Oh boy! I am going to the Woodstock Library!

Here is a picture of the Woodstock Library. If you have to cross the street, make sure you use the crosswalk.

These people are going to look at books and magazines. They love to read!

Shhhh! Once you go through the door, you have to use your quiet voice.

Look! There is a second door. Let's go through the second door.
Time to whisper!

Oh wow. There are lights and books and people everywhere!

Stay calm! The library is a safe place. If bright lights hurt your eyes, you can wear sunglasses or a hat. If you need help, go to the Information Desk.

The library has computers. If you want to use one ask at the Information Desk. Remember, you have to be gentle with computers.

There are lots and lots of books at the library. If you get a library card, you can check out a book. This lady loves going to the library. She knows you can check out books, movies and even music!

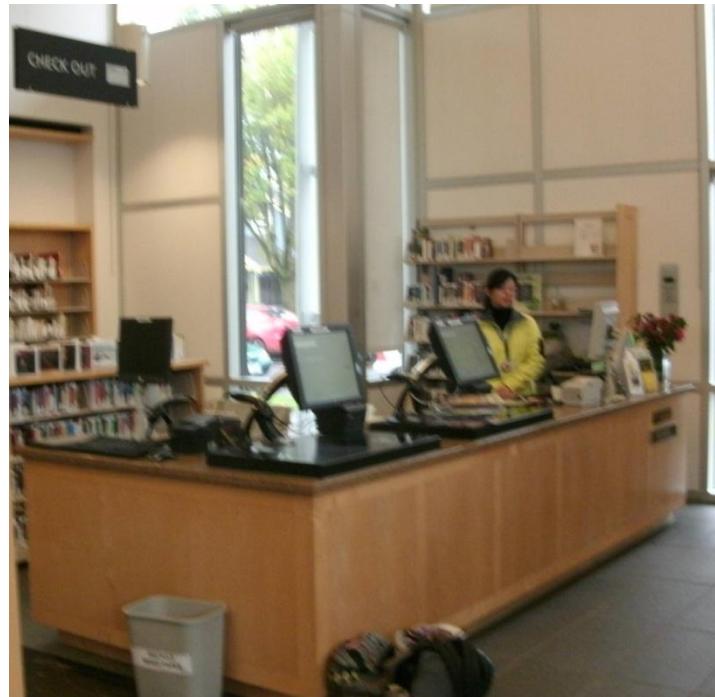

Sometimes they have story time and the librarian reads to you!

If you need the bathroom, look for the sign!

If you are going to borrow a book, go to the Check Out Desk. The nice person will help you check out your books. Librarians are very nice and it makes them happy when you read a book!

When you leave there are free newspapers by the outside door. There is a bulletin board, and free TriMet bus maps you can have.

When you return your library books, you can put them in the book drop. The book return is always open. It is important you bring your library books back on time. You have to pay a fine if your books are late.

This lady brought her books back on time!

The Woodstock Library has some cool art on the outside of the building. Remember to stop and look at it!

Have fun going to the Woodstock Library!

Say “HI!” to the librarians and remember to be very gentle with the books and computers!
